

1939 Register: Subject deceased (F.O.I. enquiry)

This paid search guide will help you to decide whether to use The National Archives' paid search service.

What information can you find out?

We will always carry out a search of our records to a high standard based on our expertise and professionalism.

1939 Register (RG 101). This series comprises digitally scanned versions of the enumerator's transcript books for the national registration of the civilian population that took place on the evening of 29 September 1939. The records cover only enumeration districts in England and Wales and do not include entries for either enlisted members of the armed forces, or people engaged, or employed, on ships.

With any search, there is never a guarantee that you will find the information you are looking for. There are often a number of possible reasons for an unsuccessful search, including the possibility that records were destroyed or lost, or that there are multiple records for individuals with identical names and we have insufficient information to distinguish between them.

Search 1: Search for a person in the Register.

This is a search in the 1939 register for one person. A separate search is required for each individual. A successful search will reveal all, or some, of the following:

- Full name
- Address
- Date of birth
- Marital status
- Occupation at time of registration
- Whether the individual was a member of the armed services or reserves

What are the charges?

Search 1

Standard charge: £28.02

The subject of the request must be dead. Proof of death, e.g. death certificate, obituary, must be uploaded. If the surname first name combination is a common one, e.g. John Smith the fee may be higher.

Please note that any enquiries relating to death certificates issued after 2006, the latest year covered by the online indexes, should be directed in the first instance to the General Register Office.

What information do we need for a search?

Please send as much information as you can. The following details are either essential or desirable for a search at our standard charge:

Essential	Desirable
First name of person to be searched for	Other first names (especially if surname is a common one)
Surname of person to be searched for	Alternative surname e.g. maiden name, change of name
Gender	House number, or name
Date of birth	Street name
County of residence	Name of City, or Town, and Borough
Evidence that the subject of the enquiry is deceased	Additional information e.g. other household members

Please note that if the combination of surname and first name is a common one such as John Smith and not enough additional information is supplied to distinguish the correct person the search may prove inconclusive or unsuccessful.
